Kristina Muxo outperformed on connection acceptance in March — 31.2% versus 21.9% for John Noble, a gap of nine percentage points. This confirms that sender positioning and narrative framing are material drivers of engagement quality. Muxo's higher follow-up volume

(242 versus 172) produces a proportionally larger active conversation pipeline heading into April.

EMAIL

The email channel reached a significant new audience in March while sustaining follow-up engagement with existing contacts.

Volume	20,000	total emails sent — 14,196 new contacts, 5,046 follow-ups
Reply Rate	1.2%	239 leads responded to outreach across the month
Interested Leads	3	prospects flagged as actively interested, ready for direct follow-up

Three leads currently identified as interested represent the most advanced stage of the email pipeline. Direct outreach to these contacts is the immediate conversion priority for April. Messaging refinement continues, with updated sequences in progress to improve the reply-to-meeting conversion rate.

APRIL PRIORITIES

The outreach engine is active across both channels. The focus for April is conversion.

On LinkedIn, 37 replies generated in March — including active conversations across both profiles — provide a clear pipeline for meeting scheduling. The 414 follow-up messages sent in March sustain ongoing momentum into the new month.

On email, the three identified interested leads are the immediate priority. Alongside direct outreach to these contacts, messaging experiments will be deployed to improve the broader reply-to-meeting rate across the full pipeline.
